Motocaddy S5 GPS

MOTOCADDY have launched the world's first motorised trolley to incorporate a built-in GPS system.

Not only will the S5 GPS transport your clubs, it gives exact distances to the front, middle and back of greens thanks to a Sureshot GPS system integrated into the trolley handle.

Courses can be downloaded direct from your PC on to a remote control handset and then uploaded wirelessly. The same handset also offers the added feature of hands-free speed control as well as a useful security function.

The S5 will not work unless the handset is in range, so a would-be thief would only be able to travel about 100 yards until the S5 became totally disabled.

The S5 GPS has a lightweight and sturdy aerospace-grade aluminium trademark S-curve frame, a simple and fuss-free locking system which allows it to fold down compactly in one move for easy transportation and quick-release wheels.

It comes complete with a highly efficient, lightweight battery and features a third-generation 200W motor.

SRP: Expect to pay around £550

Snake Eyes Cart Bag

THIS is a great trolley bag. The styling is eye-catching and the attention to detail excellent. The 14-way divider top gives instant and easy access to all clubs, and there is also an external putter pouch. I like the four-way grip system so that you are never short of a handle when setting up or packing away.

I counted 10 pockets including two full-length, a soft-lined one for valuables, a special dry pocket, and an insulated one for drinks.

I suppose it may be slightly on the heavy side for some ladies, but I think it is a very impressive bag.

Glenmuir Windflex Light wind shirt

ALTHOUGH this is a light wind shirt, it does feel more substantial than many I have tried – probably because of the lining – which means I would be happy to wear it instead of a sweater on cooler days.

The outer layer is Teflon-coated, breathable, and stretch microfibre, and it looks very smart.

This is not just because of the two-tone markings, but the jetted zip neck, side pockets and adjustable draw cord hem which ensures a perfect fit.

Very striking.
